STATE OFFICER CODE OF CONDUCT

One of the goals of CTI is to facilitate the transition from school to work. Individual conduct and appearance are part of that training. It is a special privilege to be elected to a state officer position of CTI, and it is the responsibility of the individual to conduct themselves in a proper, businesslike manner at all times.

Over the years, CTI has had an excellent reputation. Your conduct at every CTI function and school function should make a positive contribution to the reputation that has been established. Listed below are conduct rules for all state officers.

1. All officers shall behave in a courteous and respectful manner and refrain from language and/or actions that could bring discredit upon themselves, their school, and/or the CTI Organization.
2. Officers shall keep their coordinator informed of their activities and whereabouts at all times. Accidents, injuries or illness must be reported to the coordinator or Georgia CTI State Office immediately.
3. Traditional business attire is required for all CTI activities, unless otherwise designated by the coordinator or the state coordinator. (No jeans, shorts, tennis shoes, etc.)
4. Curfew times for all overnight activities will be assigned by the local advisor or the Georgia CTI State Office and will be enforced. Curfew is defined as being in your assigned room by the designated hour.
5. No alcoholic beverages or non-prescription narcotics may be possessed at any time during your term as a CTI state officer, under any circumstances. Use or possession of such substances is illegal and may subject the officer to criminal prosecution and removal from the state officer team.
6. Use of all tobacco products is prohibited by state officers.
7. Communication is a must with Executive Director and CTI Coordinator about all meetings and deadlines. The state officer is responsible for notifying both, the Executive Director and CTI Coordinator in advance when an absence or conflict arises.
8. Conduct conducive to a CTI state officer is required at all times, including all CTI activities but not limited to CTI activities. Examples of unacceptable behaviors could include, but is not limited to, inappropriate language, activities which are illegal or which present a danger to self or others, damaging or defacing of property.

By signing this form, I, the nominee, am acknowledging that I fully understand and agree to comply with these guidelines. Furthermore, I am aware that violation of this Code of Conduct could result in my removal from the CTI State Officer Team.

Qualities of Leadership

A good leader has many of the of leadership qualities listed below. CTI members should begin to develop these qualities while in high school and should continue to improve them throughout adulthood.

1. Respect for the worth and rights of others.

The good leader has great respect for the infinite worth and dignity of human being. He realizes that every normal person has certain talents, which should permit him to make worthy contributions to society. He holds that other people should have the same right to live fully and the opportunity to develop their capacities as he desired for himself.

2. Belief in democracy.

The good leader is a strong believer in democracy and democratic principles. He believes that the group has both the right and the ability to make its own decisions. He believes that the decisions reached by an informed group are usually sounder, better understood, and more likely to be carried out than the decisions imposed upon a group. He believes that the group has the right and the capacity to choose its own leaders and to determine their functions.

3. Ability and readiness to shoulder responsibility.

To be a leader, one must be willing and able to shoulder responsibility for his own actions and his fair share (or more) of the responsibilities of his group. He is willing to do his part of the work and does not alibi his shortcomings. He is capable of doing things needed by the group.

4. Initiative.

To lead means to show the way. A leader must have the ability to originate or start an action; he must be willing to "start out" before others do. The good leader plans carefully what he is to undertake and proceeds with the courage of his convictions rather than with reckless abandon. People admire the person who is willing to "get his feet wet first," to step out and make the first try.

5. Optimism and enthusiasm.

There must be something to be done before leadership can be exercised. The good leader believes that this something to be done is important and that the task can be done; that a way can be found; that obstacles can be removed; that the problem can be solved. He is able to enlist the services of others in the undertaking. He goes about the task with zest and enjoyment. He causes others to have enthusiasm for the undertaking.

6. Ability to work with others in a friendly and peaceful manner.

Leadership is with people. A good leader gets along well with others. Other people are glad to associate with him in an undertaking. He is straightforward, industrious, and agreeable. He gives credit where credit is due and does not seek credit for himself. He is a team-man rather than one who plays to the grandstand. He has the ability to get others to assist in an undertaking.

7. Open-mindedness.

The good leader is open-minded. He does not claim to have all the answers. He seeks the thoughts and views of others and supports them if they seem better than his own. He realizes that others have convictions as well as himself. He is willing to hear all sides before guiding the group to decide which way seems the better or best. He is willing to compromise for the good of the undertaking.

8. Strength of conviction.

A good leader has convictions. Others know that he will take a stand. He is willing to stand up and be counted. He will take his position and defend it so long as it should be defended. He can be convinced if evidence is presented that there is a better way; and when convinced, he can be counted on to defend that position.

9. Ability to communicate.

In order to lead, usually one must be able to tell or show others the way he is going. He must be able to communicate his thoughts and actions so that they may be clearly understood – so that others can understand the position he takes and the course he is following. One does not lead by “talking out of both sides of his mouth.”

10. Public-spirited – spirit of service.

The good leader must be willing to work for the common good. People should not be expected to help one achieve a selfish end. To be public spirited, one must desire things that benefit all the people. He is willing to make some personal sacrifices for the common good. In the community the good leader is known as a good community man, a good neighbor, one whom others are glad to have in their midst.

11. Confidence and respect of one's fellows.

A good leader has the confidence and trust of his fellows. They believe in his willingness and ability to perform. He can be counted on to come through. He is trustworthy, loyal to his friends and his group, and has high personal integrity. His word is as good as his bond. He does not try to four-flush or to impress others by shame. He is known as a straight shooter that is able and willing to see a job through.
